THE RIGHT2KNOW CAMPAIGN

The Right2Know Campaign (R2K) is a coalition of many organisations and activists who are building a people's movement to support community struggles for access to information and freedom of expression. The campaign was launched in August 2010 to challenge the "Secrecy Bill" but has grown - and today has a broader mandate to tackle a broader problem:

STAND UP FOR THE COMMUNITY'S RIGHT TO KNOW!

WHY DO WE NEED THE RIGHT TO KNOW?

Imagine trying to pass an exam or trying to do a job without having the necessary information. We all know what the result would be - we would fail the exam and not be able to do the job properly. The point is that without the information we need - whether it is for an individual exam or for ensuring your local municipality delivers quality and affordable basic services to your community - we are left in the dark.

The good news is that whether it relates to the activities of your councillor, or provincial government plans in your community, or holding a local factory to account: you have the right to know!

This means that all communities have a right to FREE INFORMATION, FULL INCLUSION, and FAIR PROCESS!

FREE INFORMATION →

This means you must be fully informed about what is planned for your community; the information should be public and easy to access and easy to understand!

FULL INCLUSION →

This means you should be consulted by the officials or bodies that will take decisions that affect you and your community, and be invited to important meetings!

FAIR PROCESS →

Government officials, politicians and other powerful people (e.g. local business owners) must listen to your demands. Your views matter and your voice must be heard!

the four legs of the Right2Know:

HOW CAN YOU USE INFORMATION?

Having the right to know and the right to speak out means being included and informed so that the community can empower itself with information and take decisions for itself. Ensuring the right to know is one small way of making democracy work for the ordinary person on the street.

And many communities have experienced how government officials, politicians or private companies will try to shut the community out of a process and deny them access to information as a way of disempowering the community and not being accountable!

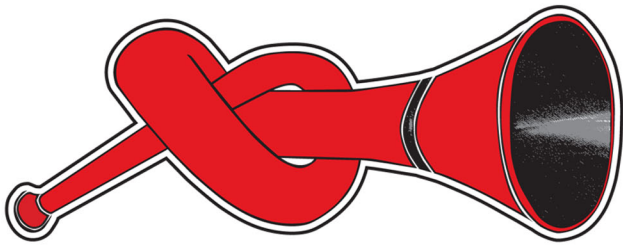

THIS MEANS YOU HAVE THE RIGHT TO KNOW:

- How the municipality is spending the community's money!
- What are local government's plans to improve service delivery, reduce unemployment, or fight corruption? Are they delivering on those plans?
- What are the local housing allocation plans?
- Who has received service tenders from the municipality and how much they're paid!
- Whether a local company is obeying labour laws and treating their employees fairly!
- Are they polluting the water or making the air dirty? You have a right to know how their activities are affecting the environment!
- If a private company is receiving money to provide a service to the community (e.g. collecting the rubbish, building low-cost houses) are they using the community's money properly?

There are many other examples! This kind of information should be freely available to everyone. But often it isn't - many activists and community leaders have experienced a climate of secrecy around these issues!

Where there is too much secrecy, it often means wasted money, inefficient government, corruption and human rights abuses.

JOIN THE STRUGGLE FOR ACCESS TO INFORMATION!

Information is power. An informed people that can use radio & TV stations, newspapers, magazines, and websites to have public discussions, exchange information and raise their voices is a powerful people. Power-hungry politicians and profit-driven businesses are fighting over who controls the media, because it will help them control the people!

But R2K is calling for media freedom and diversity. Without freedom the media would become the voice of the government, but without diversity of ownership and access they would only serve the interests of a few people!

MORE MEDIA, NOT LESS!

MEDIA FREEDOM FOR ALL!

Free media is a public good – our society needs independent, informative journalism and SA's Constitution says it is our right! The media should be independent of control from government officials, politicians and corporations. R2K stands against all censorship and for the freedom of journalists to practice their ethics and protect their sources.

THE RIGHT TO CALL, SMS & DATA

The internet empowers everyone to access and share information. But even though almost everyone in South Africa has a cell phone and many phones are able to access the internet, most people can't afford it! This is because cell phone companies are making super profits! The right to communicate is in our constitution (like the right to water and electricity) and R2K is campaigning for free basic and affordable airtime, SMS, and data. The cell phone companies can afford it, so why don't they provide it?

FIGHT FOR YOUR RIGHTS!

Knowing your rights is the first step. But the next step is to fight for those rights, because we all know that action is more important than words. The fight for our right to know is central to the fight for all our other rights – the right to decent housing, safe communities, clean water, and many other things. Without information to empower and inform our struggles, we are fighting for those rights with one hand tied behind our backs.

If you and your community know your rights to access information and then organise and fight for them, not only will you and your community be more empowered but can also hold political leaders, government and local businesses accountable. This is what real democracy is all about!

We demand the right to know!

SUPPORT MEDIA DIVERSITY!

In South Africa most of our mass media is controlled by just 5 companies (four private companies and the SABC). Community media organisations that are trying to serve the needs of the members of their community are under-funded and struggle to survive! We need to limit the power of the dominant companies and should have many more publicly funded radio & TV stations, newspapers, magazines, and websites to tell our stories and give us a voice.

Is there a law that can help?

In South Africa there is a law that's meant to ensure your right to access information: the Promotion of Access to Information Act (we also call it PAIA - say 'pie-uh').

PAIA says that every person can request information or documents from government bodies and private bodies and they should get a response within 30 days.

But although PAIA is meant to empower us, it's often a frustrating process!

The Human Rights Commission says that 2 out of 3 times that a community or person has used PAIA to ask for information from government, they get no response!

Other communities report that they had to wait a long time to get the information, or got information that was very hard to understand or didn't answer their questions.

These are some organisations that may be able to offer you advice or help you to request information:

DEFEND OUR WHISTLEBLOWERS!

WHAT IS A WHISTLEBLOWER? A whistleblower is someone who sees wrongdoing, and speaks out about it! Like a soccer ref who sees a foul and then 'blows the whistle', a whistleblower uses their freedom of expression to speak up and let the public know that someone is breaking the law or doing something wrong.

WHAT ARE SOME EXAMPLES? A whistleblower could be someone who exposes a company that is exploiting its workers, or an official who exposes municipal corruption. When the public gets information about illegal activity - in government or a private company - that information is often coming from a whistleblower. That person may take information to an elected official, a body like the Public Protector or Human Rights Commission, or a journalist.

WHAT ARE YOUR RIGHTS? Although the Constitution protects the rights of whistleblowers, and we have laws that are meant to promote their rights (such as the Protected Disclosures Act) in reality there is not much protection for whistleblowers, and such people face huge challenges!

For example, people who blow the whistle on their employer often lose their job (even though the law says you can't be fired for blowing the whistle)! Sometimes the corrupt person will say the whistleblower has broken the law and hire a lawyer to threaten them or take them to court. Sometimes whistleblowers have even been hurt or killed.

South Africa's whistleblowers are being targeted, intimidated, and silenced.

We must stand with them!
